

Post-Doc position with a focus on behavioral economics/behavioral decision theory

Grenoble Ecole de Management (GEM) in Grenoble, France (<http://en.grenoble-em.com/>) is seeking a full-time post doctorate level researcher for a European Union research project on the effects of individual time and risk preferences on the adoption of energy efficiency measures in households.

The ideal candidate has a PhD in economics, psychology or marketing, with a strong conceptual background in behavioral economics/behavioral decision theory. Expertise in survey design/implementation and in micro-econometric methods would be a plus. Candidates who have shown the ability to combine theory with empirical work are especially encouraged to apply. Applicants must be highly proficient in English and have excellent professional writing skills. The position starts in March 2015 and may run up to 2.5 years. Compensation is based on skills and experience. The position offers an international academic environment and ample opportunities for network-building.

Grenoble Ecole de Management is a fast growing business school located at the foot of the French Alps in a vibrant and growing metropolitan area with a strong emphasis on high-tech industries (especially nanotechnologies, micro-electronics, and energy). The School benefits from this community and has established a strong reputation in the management of technology and innovation. Grenoble Ecole de Management has the triple accreditation AACSB, EQUIS, and AMBA. Degrees awarded include Bachelor, Masters, MBA, DBA, and PhD.
